

A vote is scheduled on Jun 2nd that may further erode the current state of media ownership in the US - that will allow the possibility of consolidations in radio and TV that make the current Clear Channel stranglehold look like a regional convenience store chain.

There already exists in our country a bias in existing media that passes feel-good entertainment TV for journalism, that writes its own rules and controls entire geographical markets, and yet we are considering relaxing regulation even further! I hope you'll take a long, objective look at the damage that has already been done in the time since the Telecommunications Act of 1996 and consider the error of your ways.

Let's not make an already serious problem even worse.
